

Antique City Adding Machine Is Favored Over Modern Type

Ancient Contraption Is Temperamental But Is Darling of Clerks.

A THING OF MANY LEVERS
Intricacies of Mechanical Mathematician Easy for Engineers.

At her the modern adding machine, with its intricate contraption, sometimes in books and pulls off kinds of queer counts and turns up curious figures. In short, an adding machine is rather temperamental.

But so with the aged accountants, who are gathered together at the annual meeting in the form of a social gathering, the antique contraption turns out the work and has a mutual understanding. It has never failed.

Who Dropped Granger Twist in Well? Fuss Reaches Into Courts

Now that the old has been clamped down on alcohol and the trouble that brews in its brewing, tobacco is taking the place of trouble maker and making something for reformers to shoot at.

A little thing like a handful of Granger's twist has twisted up whole neighborhoods and a mile out of town on the Prairie Dog road.

But if there hadn't been trouble before and if the tobacco hadn't been dropped into the well of Mrs. Anna B. Chamberlain, the weed wouldn't have to take the blame.

The story first appeared at the county courthouse in the office of the county attorney when W. E. Childs filed a complaint against Mrs. Chamberlain for disturbing the peace.

Both parties have built new houses out in the country and Childs has charge of the electric lights. A misunderstanding arises over the current and the neighbors disagree. Then in some way a handful of nicotine in the form of a twist was found in the bottom of the well in Mrs. Chamberlain's home, the only water source in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Chamberlain gave Childs a piece of her mind disturbing the peace of his and the complaint followed.

All indicators, dials, cranks and scales moved back to the original setting and the operator starts all over again, straightened the wires. When the process is completed the total peeks out from a crevice in the machine. It takes only a few more turns of the crank to clear the machine of figures.

The Future Now

Has your Will been properly drawn by a lawyer versed in probate matters?

Have you nominated your Executor? One that will be here when you have passed on and will be in a position to take care of your estate efficiently?

Have you named your trustee so that the (corpus-principal) residue of your estate will be held intact and distributed as you wish and to those for whom you intend it or so that the income only may be used for a certain period or until contingencies arise permitting the use of the principal or any part of it?

These are important matters and should have your immediate attention.

The Exchange Trust company was organized for just such purposes. It is perpetual. Your estate needs its "Services." Your heirs and beneficiaries will receive what they are entitled to, as you direct and all details of administration will be cared for to the best interests of all concerned. Come in and permit us to tell you about the many advantages to be gained by giving thought and consideration to vital questions regarding the handling of your estate and its distribution.

Roosters Named After Famous Statesmen Are Caged and Sent by President Wilson to Alabama Citizens

COUNTRY fancies who appraise their prize birds in three figures can hardly compete with the distinguished quartet of roosters brought from France by Admiral Knapp and recently presented by President Wilson.

But if there hadn't been trouble before and if the tobacco hadn't been dropped into the well of Mrs. Anna B. Chamberlain, the weed wouldn't have to take the blame.

The story first appeared at the county courthouse in the office of the county attorney when W. E. Childs filed a complaint against Mrs. Chamberlain for disturbing the peace.

Then in some way a handful of nicotine in the form of a twist was found in the bottom of the well in Mrs. Chamberlain's home, the only water source in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Chamberlain gave Childs a piece of her mind disturbing the peace of his and the complaint followed.

All indicators, dials, cranks and scales moved back to the original setting and the operator starts all over again, straightened the wires. When the process is completed the total peeks out from a crevice in the machine. It takes only a few more turns of the crank to clear the machine of figures.

If one would multiply a string of figures by another figure, a screw must first be turned to the correct position (secret in the engineer's office) and a line of indicator is moved in another direction. Then the operator proceeds with the multiplying operation. He turns the crank twice and the first digit in the multiplicand is thereby multiplied by the multiplier. An indicator is moved so that it points to the second digit in the multiplicand; the crank is turned twice and the second digit is multiplied. And so the operation continues.

The machine also divides and subtracts, but the operation involved could not be demonstrated on paper if demonstrated at all satisfactorily on the machine. But it is enough to say that Engineer Wyss' contraption is one of the most intricate pieces of machinery in use, but regardless of this fact, it is a favorite with attaches of the engineer's office. They use the machine while the big, modern, electrically operated adding machine stands idle. But the antique contraption turns out the work and for those with whom it appears to have a mutual understanding it has never failed.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP FOR STREET RAILWAYS

New York Franchise Expert States There Is No Escape From Public Ownership.

FOR SERVICE OR A PROFIT?

Whether Continuity of Service Is To Be Guaranteed Is Another Very Important Matter.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Municipal ownership is the only solution in the American street railway problem, according to a franchise expert.

Delos P. Wilcox, New York franchise expert, who testified today before the federal electrical railway commission, drawing from an experience with trolley masters running track lines many years ago and particularly upon his present connection with investigation of the affairs of the Pacific Electric Railway company of New Jersey, Mr. Wilcox said there was no escape from the conclusion of municipalities to the handling of transportation as an essential public service and not for private profit.

The street railway problem, he said, narrowed down to four questions that must be determined: first, whether the investment should be regarded as a speculative one or be guaranteed; second, whether the business was to be conducted primarily for service or for profit; third, whether continuity of service was not to be guaranteed, outlawing suspension through strike, and fourth, whether public or private agencies should own and operate the roads.

Lizzie Leslie Writes to Tulsa Saying She Wants a Millionaire

Hunting for happiness, experts say, both in the city and other cities, damaged in search of a spouse, in the opinion of Miss Lizzie Leslie of Tulsa, Okla., judging from her requirements set forth in a communication to Mayor Hubbard in which she specifies that her "beautiful" must be at least a millionaire.

Lizzie's letter, entitled "Hunting for Happiness," is copied here:

I am looking for a tall, blue-eyed, 26-year-old husband. He must have a million dollars. I am small, called pretty, brown eyes and a nice teacher. Please send photo.

I am 38. If I find a person I can live with all my heart and soul better than life and am sure he loves me the same I will marry him. I never did a bad act before God in my life. Please excuse. I am short, 5 feet 2 inches tall.

"Lizzie Leslie, 12, West Twelfth street, Tulsa, Okla."

Verily, Tulsa is really famous for millionaires. But Lizzie doesn't stop with the communication. She seals the back of her envelope with a sticker, lavender and green with a red heart binding two sweethearts close and the inscription above: "It's got to be someone I love."

LOST YOUR DISCHARGE, JACK? ONE'S BEEN FOUND

Have you lost your discharge certificate? If so, inquire at the local army recruiting station. An honorable discharge belonging to Henry Parke Hopper, who was discharged at Camp Pike, June 11, was found on a Prison train and turned over to Sergeant L. Q. Hobbs in charge of the local recruiting office.

According to the certificate, Hopper left France May 5, 1918, after having seen service in the First Division, and was promoted to the rank of sergeant with the Second Division. His name is given as Miami, Oklahoma, but a letter mailed to him there was returned.
